Northwest Missouri State College will offer an outstanding selection of workshops this summer.

The 16 graduate and undergraduate workshops range from areas of academic seminars such as calculus and aerodynamics to activity sessions such as band and the cheerleading clinics. Some of the workshops are scheduled to begin as early as May 29. Graduate and undergraduate credit in most sessions will be given at a cost of $8 per college credit hour.

Members of the college faculty, as well as visiting authorities will conduct the workshops, set up under the direction of Dr. Charles E. Thate, dean of administration. Registration will be held the first morning of each workshop in the Office of the Registrar.

Physical education workshops will include Driver and Traffic Safety, with Coach Robert Iglehart as instructor, and Theory of Wrestling, with Coach Jerry Landwer directing. Both will be held May 29 to June 9. Calculus for the high school teacher taught by Marvin R. Winzenread, also will be held May 29 to June 16.

Four workshops taking place June 12 to June 23 are Live-Back Evaluation, Floyd Hough Sr., director; Physical Education for the Mentally Retarded, Miss Bonnie Magill, di-

From one to four members of a high school staff may enroll for non credit if accompanied by their sponsor. The director, Mrs. T. H. Eckert, will teach a number of the classes. She will be assisted by Victor Buntz, Oregon, in photography and layout classes at the June 12-23 session.

The annual Northwest State Cheerleading Clinic, which draws hundreds of participants, will be directed by Miss Bonnie Magill from June 25 to June 30. Workshops in Advanced Brass Techniques and Marching Band Techniques, under the direction of C. Ward Rounds, are

By Mary Asbell
"Ready? Pull!" Ken Bassett, judge, yelled the words which started the girls' tug of war, the first event of NWMSC's annual Walk Out Day on Apr. 19.

The games and races followed the ringing of the campus bell by Nick Erganian, student body president, and Joe Logan, Union Board president, at 8:10 a. m. The ringing was the signal for more than 3,000 students and 200 faculty members to march out of their classes for a day of fun.

Approximately 72 girls donned grubby clothes and gathered at the baseball field to compete in a tug of war, conducted by Janet Wyman and John Danilson, Union Board committee members. Six teams of 12 members each pulled in heats judged by Ed Lambright and Bassett, both of the Union Board.

First place winners were Cindy Miller, Ann Lauber, Jan Roberts, Darlene Collins, Helen Duncan, Jacki Oliphant, Kathy Thompson, Sandy Eckhoff, Chris Beal, Gloria Lewis, and Karen Colton, Delta Zeta. Second place went to the Delta Sigma Phi Mamas. Cheri Jordon and Terry Stitt, Mike Scott and Denny Jarrett next took first places in the women's and men's bicycle races. Ed Duzenberry and Jeff Andrews, Union Board committee members, officiated at the races, which were held in front of Phillips Hall. All first and second place winners received trophies.

Four bands, The Sirens, The Societys, The Morlocks, and The Benzene Ring, next competed in a Battle of the Bands judged by Roger King and Russell Morey, business instructors. Honors went to The Benzene Ring composed of Gary Veylupek, Dwight Thomas, Andy Peake, Riley Shank, and Ron Mitchell as winners of the trophy and the right to play at the evening's dance. Sally Hunter and Rod Cruz, Union Board committee members, were in charge of arrangements for the Battle.

During the ensuing three-legged race and greased pig contest, Glen Vogt, dietitian, and the cafeteria staff served a plentiful barbecue meal to all hungry students.

Kent Kavanaugh and Lewis Garrett, Mike Scott and Steve Messerschmidt came in as first and second place winners in the three-legged race. The race, officiated by Nancy Johnson, Donna Burns, and Toni Osburn, Union Board committee members, was held in college park.

In the final event of the morning, Alpha Kappa Lambda and Delta Sigma Phi fraternities each won a first place as they were the first in their heat to capture a 50-pound greased pig. Again Bassett and Lambright conducted and judged the contests. Each fraternity received a trophy for winning first place.

After a lull and complications, the famed Pozo Seco Singers appeared before a crowd of several hundred at the afternoon concert.

To complete the day, the Buckingham, a nationally known band, played for a packed gymnasium of students to dance for two hours. During this time, Bassett, representing the Union Board, presented the awards of the day. At the intermissions and after the Buckingham left, the Benzene Ring continued to provide for more dancing.

All arrangements for Walk-Out Day were made through Robert Dickey and Dan Greer, Union manager, by the Special Affairs committee of the Union Board. Mary Asbell and Bob Burrell, co-chairmen, and Tracy Witt, student assistant, were in charge of events.

Linda Smith and Donna Burns were in charge of trophies and other awards. Karen Halbert and Linda Worthwine are other members of the special affairs committee of the Union Board.

College Farm Exemplifies Way Modern Agriculture Evolved

By Marsha Smisko

Northwest Missouri State College's growth and development often means a loss of land for the college farm; but despite this handicap, the farm continues to prosper and produce more—an example of the dynamic agriculture of today.

William Treese, assistant professor, states that the farm is not competitively orientated; rather, its main goal is education. The farm, which includes the campus greenhouse might best be viewed as a 200-acre laboratory for agriculture students. It is here that classroom learning can be intensified and put into practice.

Chairman of the Department of Agriculture Dr. John Beeks is farm manager. Employed by the college and working under Dr. Beeks are two full-time farmers—Keith Runyan, employed here since 1959, and Marvin Gray, a recent appointee.

Mr. Runyan is in charge of the farm's herd of 75 registered Holstein and Jersey cows. Two students, Tom Statton and Allan Schneider, assist Mr. Runyan with the milking. Because of the recent fire, the farm is temporarily without hog and poultry stock.

Except for a small amount of food supplement, all forage and grain needed to feed the animals is grown on the farm itself. Mr. Gray is in charge of crop production, which presently includes alfalfa, corn, soybeans, and improved pasture.

Some important changes are now taking place on the farm. During the past six months the changes include the construction of the new milk barn, which is part of the future farm complex that will also include hog and poultry areas and other accompanying accommodations for machinery.

In three or four years, plans will be completed for the farm to be processing the milk for the cafeteria and offering a two-year vocational training program for dairy plant managers. In addition, under the care of Mr. Treese, new horticulture plots are being planted which include such things as grape vines and asparagus and even a small orchard.

The college farm is just north of campus. "It is always open to visitors," states Mr. Treese.

Why not get acquainted with this agrarian part of Northwest State? The college farm surely warrants the pride and interest of every student.

Professor Says: 'Irrational in Art Is Revolution'

By Gary Kabrish

Dr. John Erickson spoke of the rebirth of ideas and artistic expression in the arts to an audience of 250 Apr. 18 at the Charles Johnson Theater.

The professor, from the Department of French and Italian at the University of Kansas, stressed his concept that the irrational in the arts is actually a revolution. He spoke of the irrational as being a break in regularity, something offbeat, something impervious in part or whole to rational processes.

Because he did not want to imply that the offbeat should be interpreted in the sense of being far out, he drew a parallel between the irrational movement and Thoreau. Thoreau said that if he seemed to be out of step with the music, it was only because he "was marching to the beat of another drum."

In speaking of the irrational in the arts, Dr. Erickson went back to the end of the 19th century for the beginnings of the irrational movement because only then did the concept become something more than a question to be explored by a mere few. It was a subject to be investigated intensely by many eminent thinkers. The apparent center from which ideas were to emanate was France.

Dr. Erickson referred to the avant-garde movement in France in his discussion of the irrational. He emphasized this less conventional group because they were more successful in developing 20th century art.

Typical thinkers and artists such as Bergson, Picasso, Jarry, Gide, Proust, Debussy, and Sartre found much to criticize in this period marked by moral looseness, social inequality, and feelings of disillusionment with life which followed the two world wars. Dr. Erickson pointed out, "... in 1915 the irrational appeared more reasonable than the corpses strewn on battlefields determined by so-called rational ideologies."

In the concluding moments of his talk, Dr. Erickson re-emphasized a relative truth he had hoped to show during the lecture. "The idea that much of art has taken upon itself in this century the task of presenting the exceptional, the contradictory, the ridiculous, the nonsensical, the impossible — in short, the irrational, which neither conforms to nor pays obeisance to what we longingly cling to as sane. It is, after all, very difficult adjusting to no norms, difficult being insane. But, relatively speaking, that is life, too."

Music Therapist Works With Team Members In Rehabilitation Service for Mentally Ill

By Marjorie Hitchcock

Required: Proficiency in guitar or accordion.

Impossible for a music education degree? Not if the major is music therapy.

Steve Brown, who is taking education courses on campus this semester, has a Bachelor of Music Education degree with a major in music therapy from the University of Kansas, Lawrence. He recently completed his internship at Stockton, Calif., working as a therapist with retarded children and mentally ill adults.

The music therapist works as a team member with a psychiatrist, nurses, a psychologist, and a social worker. Music therapy is a rehabilitation service that is usually recommended by the psychiatrist on the basis of the patient's interests and needs, Brown said.

Music for therapy purposes is a tool used in dealing with patients, according to Brown. He further explained, "Music is a good medium because it is so versatile. The patients can participate in some form — playing, singing, dancing, or listening."

The music approach to therapy is realistic because the patient is integrated into a group. The group, then, can benefit together from this nonverbal communication. The group therapy causes an interaction among the patients that helps all of them. Brown described the group work as "structured reality."

The music therapist, Brown explained, begins on the patient's level, often with the use of a rock 'n roll combo—thus the need for proficiency in guitar. The therapist cannot have high ideals musically, Brown also commented.

He stated that the guitar and drums have been his most useful instruments in filling psychiatrists' prescriptions.

Music is a good means of therapy because of its universality. "A person has a need for aesthetic appreciation, both passive and active," Brown emphasized. "The patient can gain a sense of need and competency from music."

Music therapy, a new field, has no real precedent. The program at the University of Kansas, directed by Dr. E. Thayer Gaston, is the pioneer in the field. Only 11 schools in the United States offer a degree in music therapy. There are only 12 people in the country who hold a doctoral degree in the field.

Brown, a member of the National Association of Music Therapy, was graduated from Maryville High School in 1962. He played drums in the NWMSC band while in high school and was in the band and orchestra at KU. He plans to teach music therapy after completing graduate school.

Steve Brown is shown practicing the guitar he uses in his work as a music therapist.

College Fee Raise Set for Next Year

Essential expenses for the 1967-68 school year at Northwest State have been raised slightly, according to Bill Needles, assistant business manager.

Each enrollee must pay incidental, activity, and Union fees totalling $110 plus a $10 book deposit. Any out-of-state student must pay an additional fee of $110. Board and room will be $335. The $110 fees were each $100 this year.

College Plans

Other scheduled workshops are in the field of Aerospace Education, June 19 to 30; Three Dimensional Learning Activities in the Visual Arts, June 26 to July 7, Donald Robertson, director; History and Geography of Missouri, July 1 to Aug. 4, Donald Hagan, instructor.

A Workshop in the Kodaly Method of Music Teaching, offered June 19-23, will employ the services of Mrs. Katinka Daniel, who studied with Ottó Kodály, a famed Hungarian composer and teacher.

Miss Pat Hollenbeck, MSC freshman, not only won the recent Miss Maryville contest, but also the admiration of her English classmates. Instead of having a scheduled quiz, the class enjoyed hearing Pat sing her winning number, "Softly, As I Leave You."

What is this the Stroller hears about the childish "Mr. Mud"? Does one really have two choices when they are "Stay or Flunk"?

The Stroller is proud of the service-minded groups on campus.

Last week 12 Tekes helped with the downtown alley cleanup on Maryville's Cleanup Day. Earlier this year the Alpha Psi Omega service fraternity assisted with a campus cleanup.

These groups are quite a contrast to the careless litterbugs who apparently take little pride in either their own actions or the appearance of their surroundings.

A new language has been developed by the foreign language department and a student secretary in the Missourian office. The rooms are side by side and share a telephone party line. Since many of the calls are for the newspaper, the reporters usually answer. Should it be for the linguists, a loud tapping, of various rhythms, is sounded by the coed. To expedite her work, the secretary uses a different code for each professor.

A friend of the Stroller's needs a do-it-yourself-typewriter-repair kit.

When a Perrin Hall coed needed to clean her typewriter, she took it all apart. Now she just can't figure out where those eight ball bearings got Long perplexed over what to call the useless paraphernalia which accumulates in the back of professor's desk drawers and in the bottom of women's handbags, the Stroller is indebted to the Missourian sports editor for coming up with a most unusual name for these bits of odds and ends — diddly twat.

Weekend Forensic Activities

A dual debate with novice teams from NEMSTC, Kirksville, will be held at 2 and 3:30 p. m. on the 4th floor of the Administration Building this afternoon.

Ruth Martin and Bill Daniels will switch sides during the debate rounds. Cheri Jarowitz and Phyllis Easterla will defend the negative position in the first round. Upholding the affirmative in the second round will be Marlene Miller and John Munshaw.

Speech nights will be held in the Little Theatre of the Administration Building at 7 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday.

The first evening's program includes the readers' theatre "Watts Revisited," directed by Mrs. Fred Dunn; oral interpretation selections read by Mrs. Charles Koerble's students, and original orations by Linda Brinton, Terry Lutz, and Jim Hulse.

The second evening's program will begin with the readers' theatre "Will the Real Jesus Christ Please Stand Up?" by members of the advanced oral interpretation class directed by Dr. Ralph Fulson.

A cross examination debate on the national resolution dealing with foreign policy commitments will follow. Linda Hornaday and Cheri Jarowitz, affirmative, will meet Marjorie Hitchcock and Ron Wineinger, negative.

Dr. Chandler Talks At Honors Dinner

Dr. Tommy Chandler, assistant professor of English, was guest speaker Tuesday night at the Soroptimist Club dinner meeting honoring outstanding seniors from Maryville High School and Mount Alverno Academy.

Concentrate, Then Demonstrate

To riot or not to riot. Is that the question?

This is changing the old word sequence around a bit, but it seems strangely pertinent to some college students presently.

In Warrensburg and Jefferson City some Missouri students have been flexing their newly found muscles and getting more than adequate press coverage on their efforts. However, when school officials and newsmen confront the student leaders, they receive only vague grievances about minute injustices that are invariable in the form of demands for immediate restitution.

After all the slogans and riot chants are pushed aside, it boils down to the individual student and his right under the First Amendment to the Constitution to assemble peaceably. It seems apparent, however, that few students who take part in riots worry to any great extent about the bad deal which they are trying to convince others they are getting.

It's fashionable to demonstrate. The byword seems to be, "Hey, guys, shall we go to the dance or the riots tonight?" And think of the glory for the riot leaders as they receive their dismissal papers.

Students may truly have some legitimate gripes. What is it they say about pleasing everyone all the time? In any case, there must surely be a more civilized manner in which to make ideas known. But then the bearded leaders who have spent seven years to become sophomores wouldn't get their pictures on the front page.

I suppose "concentrate before you demonstrate" would be a good policy. Be careful though; that would be playing right into the hands of the people who are trying so hard to provide a good education for all the students.

Movies to Be Shown Tonight, Tomorrow

Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas will star in tonight's Den Movie, "Seven Days in May."

The story takes place in 1974 when an idealistic President of the United States signs an agreement with Russia for nuclear disarmament. The majority of the people oppose this pact. A five star general, who regards the president as a weakling, champions a plot to overthrow the constitutional government. The general's deputy discovers the plot and reports to the President. In the seven suspenseful days before the proposed seizure, tensions mount to almost the breaking point.

Tomorrow night, George Peppard, Carroll Baker, and Alan Ladd will star in "The Carpetbaggers."

Jonas Cord Jr. takes over his father's airplane factory and runs it into a multimillion dollar business. One of his diversifications is a movie studio which brings in a view of Hollywood in the fabulous Thirties. In his tricky business operations and private life, easy women, ambitious double-dealing men, friends and foes are all devoured by Cord. A pseudo-psychological explanation is given for his obsessive greed for power, his corruption of others, and his deterioration.

'Thank-You' Goes to Staff For Creating 1967 Tower

Perhaps the old saying, "You can't judge a book by its cover," is wrong after all.

After looking beyond the attractive cover of the 1967 Tower, one can say that it certainly veils an even more delightful story: the story of a year in the life of a college and the story of those who made it that way.

The Tower is more than a tribute to the faculty and student body of NWMSC. It's a gracious thank-you that blossoms forth from every picture-packed page.

Many have enjoyed and are still enjoying the Tower's charms. They praise the excellent portrayal of themselves and their school and exclaim over every distinctive idea.

Only those who gave the 1967 Tower its birth and saw it through its many deadlines actually realize the pains of production. The readers, however, are willing to use their imagination and agree that the amount of work put into the Tower is impressive. As one Tower staff secretary said, however, letting a deep sigh escape, "It was worth it!"

The yearbook staff deserves a hearty thank-you for an excellent publication. Those who strove for perfection put out their best handiwork.

'Cats Down Mules By Margin of 5-2

Last weekend's schedule for the Bearcat courtmen included a cancellation of the match with Graceland and a victory on Saturday over the visiting Central Missouri State Mules by a score of 5-2.

The first four members of the Bearcat squad entered in singles competition posted wins. These victors were Bruce Horrell, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3; Dick Schilling, 7-5, 6-4; Bob Schilling, 6-1, 6-2; and George Varchola, 6-4, 6-1. Jim Crozier dropped his match by a score of 7-5, 6-3.

The 'Cats split the two doubles matches with the Mules as the Schilling brothers lost by a score of 6-2, 6-8, 6-3; and Horrell and Varchola turned in winning performances of 6-1 and 6-2.

Today the Bearcat courtmen will be across the net from the Park College team here, and tomorrow they will travel to Liberty for a match with the William Jewell squad.

New Captains, Past Stars Cited at Wrestling Dinner

Sophomore wrestling standouts Bill Rex, 145, and Paul Stehman, 137, were announced as co-captains for the 1967-68 mat season at a recognition dinner given for the wrestling team by the Athletic Committee.

Stehman finished fourth and Rex finished fifth in the NCAA College Division Wrestling Finals in March. They were elected captains by team members.

In addition, the squad voted Ron James, 1967 captain and third place finisher in the NCAA Finals, as Most Valuable Wrestler, Stehman as the Most Improved Wrestler, Stan Zeamer as recipient of the Tony Nelson Award for the most outstanding freshman, and Bill Mueller as the Mat King. James and Stehman were also given their All-American certificates by Coaches Gary Collins and Jerry Landwer.

Coach Collins also announced that the NWMSC Bearcats, MIAA Champs and 11th place NCAA finishers, were rated 10th in the final college division national rating by Amateur Wrestling News.

Several schedule changes have been planned for next year, according to Coach Collins.

A triple dual meet with Fort Hays and Adam State College will be held in Alamosa, Colo. Adam State won the Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Champion this year and placed second in the 1967 NAIA finals.

Collins, who will be assuming duties as head coach, indicated that Wayne State, Augustana, Illinois, and the University of South Dakota have been invited to participate in the NWMSC Invitational Tournament for next year. Kansas University and Midwestern College, both entered in last year's tournament, have not been invited to compete in the 1968 event, and the newly added teams will make competition considerably stiffer, Coach Collins believes.

Sid Walston will take over duties as assistant coach for next season. Walston, a graduate of the University of Iowa, has served as high school coach at Polo, Ill.

Schilling Hits Serve

Dick Schilling, the younger half of the Schilling brothers' doubles tennis team, powers a return to a Central Missouri opponent. Schilling and his brother Bob both won in singles competition against CMSC and comprised the winning No. 1 doubles team.

Hager arrived at the track late for the final running and was given a quick rubdown and only half an hour to warm up for the event. As a result of hurried preparations, his 10.1 time was far short of the 9.6 time he ran in the preliminaries. The event was won with a 9.4 seconds run by Jim Hines of Texas Southern.

The mile relay team composed of Normal Howlett, John Banning, Kent Kavanaugh, and Pete Meindertsma was clocked at 3:32 in the preliminaries, but failed to make the finals.
